1. When you heard the description of the new heaven and new earth, what stood out to you the most, and how did it reshape your understanding of what heaven is actually like?
2. The message emphasized that heaven is not primarily about a place but about who you will be and who you will be with. How does that challenge or correct the way you typically think about eternity?
3. The message described four realities of your future self: thoroughly joyful, astoundingly productive, morally flawless, and completely fulfilled. Which of these do you find hardest to believe, and why?
4. The passage says that God will dwell with His people and that you will see His face. What do you think it will be like to live fully known and fully loved, with nothing hidden?
5. In light of the promise that God is “making everything new,” how should that future reality shape the way you live, endure suffering, or pursue Christ today?
